

Bzzz!

No-one told the bumble bee
that it would never fly.
It just took off so it could see the view from in the sky.

When experts saw its ratio
of wings to body size,
they proved the bumble was too slow
to buzz into the skies.

With gravity the boffins spat,
"It carries too much weight;
Its wings are short, it's far too fat."
But they were all too late.

The bumble bee rose in the air
(quite slowly it is true).
It circled, landed, rose again
then vanished from their view.
